After a wocal planning and zoning committee meeting, during which residents expressed their concerns for the noise and eye-sore the huge department-grocery store would create, Wal-Mart and Boyle Engineering, the firm hired by Wal-Mart to plan the store's layour, returned with some modifications to their plan.

BOISE - Wildfires burned out of control in the Northern Rockies on Monday, and Forest Service Chief Michael Dombeck said several blazes in Idaho and Montana will probably not be out until the snow flies.

The National Interagency Fire Center will dispatch a team by the middle of the week to begin t r a i n i n g another bat allion of troops at Fort Hood, Texas, for deployment to the fire lines in the West. And Dombeck predicted it will not be the last.

Sixty-four major fires were still ablage in 11 Western states, having already burned over 820,000 acres. More than 20,000 civilian and military firefighters managed to contain 60 fires in the past week, Dombeck said; but new starts were being ignited nearly as fast.

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—There is no-more urgent task for Vice President Al Gore than to emerge from next week's Democratic National Convention as his own man, and in selecting Connecticut Sen, Joseph I. "Wal-Mart has made some schanges," said Twin Falls attor-ney J. Dee May, who claimed to be representing more than 300 people opposed to locating the store at Pole Line and Bridgeview. "But I submit to you that they are not listening."

The real issue is changing the city's planned unit development, or PUD, for the area, he said.

development in the area not exceed 20,000 square feet. Wal-Mart's store would be at least ten times that size.

"We believe the city of Twin Falls made an agreement to keep the PUD in place," May said. "Those who read the agreement counted on it."

The people living in the subdivisions near the proposed store have invested tens of thousands of dollars in their homes, he said. Allowing Wal-Mart to build on the site would depreciate the value of that investment.

May and Jack Wright, a subdivision owner in the area, said home and lot sales have already declined since Wal-Mart made its proposal to build the store.

If that:happens, they argued,

But Republicans vowed Monday not to let Gore excape the problems of Clinton's presidency." I don't think they'll get by this just because Joe Leberman had the decency to express outrage with Bull Clinton," sald Tom Cole, chief of staff at the Republican National Committee.

Lieberman's selection brings potential risks to Gore. The most obvious is the sentor's religious faith. Political experts said Gore might receive credit for breaking barriers. They agreed that the electoral impact of selecting theirs Jewish vice presidential candidate in history is impossible to measure at this time, although some said a backlash among some voters is possible.

At the same time, Lieberman's woting record, which advisers to George W. Bush claimed was cloer to the GOP nominee on key issues such as Social Security privatization and school vsuchers, might cause problems for Gore among core Democrats, whose support for Gore remains dangerously low.

Privately, leading Republicans have said for weeks that Lieberman was Gore's best choice politically for vice president, and Monday he won praise across the political spectrum. From Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D.Mass., on the left to conservative activist William Bennett, who has teamed up with Lieberman to condemn the entertainment industry, the testimonials underscored the senator's reputation as someone who works well with members of both ator's reputation as someone who works well with members of both Democratic pollster Peter Hart said the Lieberman choice was also politically smart. "Strategically it allows him to move out from the shadow of Bill move out from the shadow of Bill Clinton and establish his own code of conduct and his own iden-tity," Hart said.

President Clinton was sched-uled to visit that fire on Tuesday for a firsthand assessment of what is becoming the worst fire season in more than a decade. Officials said Clinton wants to thank the firefighters and sol-diers for their work protecting private structures and homes and valuable natural resources. And moving the sheep might not be as simple as it sounds, he said. It's an option for the rancher, but it is not required by the rules under which the wolves were reintroduced, Collinge said.

Brailsford said he plans to move the sheep down the creek Saturday to separate the lambs and truck them out. He then would move the ewes back up the drainage. About 2,000 sheep and lambs have been in the grazing allotment since mid-July. The season ends Oct. 15.

"I've got no place to go, at least until we get the lambs shipped off," he said. Though he plans to move the sheep, the wolves may follow.

DEAR ABBY: I can't believe that "Sleepless in New Jersey" complained because her husband woke her at 4 a.m. to say goodbye before leaving for work.

My husband also gets up at 4 a.m., but I am right by his side fixing his breakfast, packing his lunch, kissing him goodbye, making sure he starts his day off right. A hassle? Sure it is, but I do it because my husband sacrifices for our family each day by working at a job that requires him to get up early so I can stay at home with the children. I have three young children to take care of, a home-based business and many other things I give my all to each day, I am some-times tired and do occasionally nap. My husband is able to come back in the "afternoon, and the rest of the day is family time. It sounds to me as though "Sleepless's" husband is doing mything he can to make her pay some attention to him. # Consumer borrowing slows in June

WASHINGTON (AP) — Borrowing by Americans, both on credit cards and to finance auto and other personal loans, slowed only slightly in June from May's torid nace

pace. e Federal Reserve said

The Federal Reserve said Monday that consumer credit increased by $12 billion in June, or 9.9 percent at an annual rate, while the category that includes auto loans rose by the largest amount since January 1999. The overall figure was higher than economists had expected after a huge jump in May that was revised upward in the new report. The Fed said overalborrowing rose by $14.2 billion in May, or an annual rate of 11.8 percent, the second largest gain in 17 months.

The overall economy, as measured by the gross domestic product, accelerated in the April-June quarter to a strong 5.2 percent, rather than slowing as had been expected.

However, the strength came from strong business investment and government spending rather than the consumer. Consumer spending slowed from an increase in the first quarter of 7.6 percent, which had been a 17-year high, down to a 3 percent annual rate of growth.

"We are starting to see a slow-down," said David Wyss, an economist at Standard & Poor's DRI, who predicted that growth in the second half of the year would be lower than the first half. The consumer credit report said that borrowing for revolving credit, a carrowing for revolving credit, a carrowing for includes credit card debt, rose by $3.7 billion in June, an annual rate of increase of 7 percent. Nonrevolving credit, which includes Ioans for autos, mobile homes and boats, rose by $8.3 billion, an annual rate of increase of 12.1 percent. That was the biggest advance since a 16.3 percent rise in January 1999.

Total outstanding consumer credit grew to $1.456 trillion in June, up from $1.440 trillion in My. Fed's report on consumer credit includes credit card debt and loans for autos, boats and mobile homes. It does not include loans backed by real estate such as home mortgages or increasingly popular home equity loans.

Idaho is awash in surplus cash, so give some back

It is patently unfair for the state of Idaho to continue amassing a budget surplus while thousands of workers have their paychecks needlessly reduced.

Can anyone explain why the Idaho Legislature is afraid of granting a meaningful tax break? The Time is ripe, because conditions couldn't be more favorable: • State government is great with other state legislature in America.

Taken as a whole, these factors amount to the political equivalent of a slow pitch right over the plate. Idaho's conservative lawmakers should knock it out of the park. Remember, this is $100 million the state doesn't need – which is why it's called "surplus."

But state lawmakers appear

Gore's VP choice is a man of character

ASHINGTON - The focus on the religious background of Sen. Joseph Lieberman, the surprise on the Democrate ticket, is both pre-dictable and superficial.
Lieberman is an Orthodox Jew, the first of his religion to compete in national election. In choosing Lieberman, Vice President Al Gore followed the pattern of former Vice President Walter F. Mondale, who picked Rep. Geraldine Ferraro in 1984 to be the first woman to run in the No. 2 spot for a major parry. You remember how that worked out. They carried one state—Mondale's Minnesota, not Ferraro's New York.
But Lieberman is much more than a pattern-breaker. He did not run—and state - Mondale's Minnesota, not Ferraro's New York.

But Lieberman is much more than a pattern-breaker. He did not run - and win - tough elections as state senator, attorney general and senator from - Connecticut as the Jewish candidate, any more than John F. Kennedy ran as the Catholic candidate for president in 1960. Lieberman has made himself the most popular politician in either party in his highly competitive, two-party state by dint of character and achievement. He brings the same solid reputation to his race as former Defense Secretary Dick Cheny does to the Republican ticket headed by Texas Gov. George W. Bush. Bush and Gore have a family tradition of public service in their patrimony. They have chosen as partners men of humbler backgrounds whose declication to honorable politics and effective government is more than a match for their own. The American people can count themselves lucky in the choice they face.

electoral votes in the Democratic col-umn. "Lieberman," he said, "meets every test you could apply to a potential president."

umn. "Lieberman," he said, "meets every test you could apply to a potential president."

There are only two problems with the choice. Lieberman is up for re-election this year, and Connecticut law permits him to be on the ballot for both offices, as Lyndon Johnson was in Texas in 1960. It would be a huge upset if he were to lose the Senate race. But if the Democratic ticket wins nationally, the Lieberman seat would be filled by Rowland's appointee—a potential yelfown of the property of the Gore.

Lieberman is also a plus in electoral math. Because he probably takes Connecticut out of play and strengthen Gore's lead in New York, with its large Jewish vote, there is less reason for the Bush campaign to invest heavily in expensive New York City television.

That, in turn, would reduce Bush's prospects in battleground New Jersey, which gets its television mainly from New York and Philadelphia. But Lieberman's real strength is the moral character he adds to the Democratic itcket. As the first prominent Democratic officeholder to condemn Clinton's lying about his affair with Monica Lewinsky, he earned respect that was undiminished by his later decision to vote against removing Clinton from Office.

As I wrote a few months ago, when he and co-author Michael D'Orso published their book, "In Fraise of Public Life," Leberman embodies and defines the standard by which politicians should be judged.

Lieberman embodies and defines the standard by which politicians should be judged.

Let me quote his words again:
"Although public figures may face the same everyday pressures as the people we represent, we are not, and should not be, judged by the same standards. More should be expected of us... We are public officials, not private citizens...
"We are - whether we like it or not role models. We have voluntarily entered a contract with the voters that is based on trust. If we violate that trust, our government, our democracy, suffers. So the first question a public figure must, always ask himself when making a decision about his personal behavior or actions ... is not just 'Is it legal?' but 'Is it right?"

"During the past several years, the American people have watched too many public figures in both parties try to make distinctions between whether something is legal or whether it is right. The consequences for our politics have been disastrous, because the people correctly see these as attempts to rationalize behavior that is wrong, and they turn away disgusted."
That's telling it like it is.

Government is to blame for bears

Government is to blame for bears
I was stunned by the July 22 Times.
News article on grizzly bear populations roaring back.
The article blamed roads and logging for injuring the bears. This is a lie. How could logging and road building endanger the bear in Yellowstone Park, where there has never been anylogging or road building? The 1997 Environmental Impact Statement for the Targhee National Forest itemizes the deaths of 63 bears from 1959 to 1996. Not one was killed by a logger.
The book, "Playing God in Yellowstone" by Alston Chase, uses government documents to itemize the deaths of about 300 bears from 1959 to 1985. None of them were caused by loggers.

1985? The federal government, of course!
Under the premise of protecting tourists, the Park Service and federal Fish and Wildlife Service shot or poisoned more than 208 grizzlies. They killed them with overdoses of the hallucinogenic drug, angel dust, and dropped live bears from helicopters thousands of feet in the air. They killed black bears without even recording it because black bears were considered too insignificant to even record. Fish and Wildlife then issued a memo to their employees to cover up knowledge of these actions and keep the in. remation from the public.

What is the combined effect of roads and logging on bears? The Targhee National Forest study found that logging improved habitat effectiveness by an average of 32 percent because the plants bears cat grow better in a sunny clear-cut than they do in a shady forest. The logging mimics the historical lightning fires nature used to have but humans now extinguish. Ninety-nine percent of all bears are found within one-half mile of these forest openings whether they were caused by fire or logging. It is ironic, but our Smokey the Bear policies result in a forest which is inhospitable to bears.

The Times-News needs to lay blame for the endangered bears at the feet of our government and not on an industry which is helping the problem.

Jins Shackelford, executive director

Too many insecure males measure their masculinity by the caliber of weapon they pack, and to these, any Democratic compromise in the guncontrol debate is akin to self-castration. Ouch!

America still reigns in violence, with a rape every six minutes, a murder every 31 minutes. We average 7,900 cases of police brutality a year. Copp often end confrontation with old women, children and minorities with summary execution. When did you hear of an unjustified police shooting? But remember, guns don't kill people – cops do.

Overseas, we are an outlaw nation, unleashing terrorism in the holy name of profit, a bully ignoring our war crimes indictments. We refuse to sign treaties protecting children, banning land mines criminalizing genocide or protecting our fragile ecology. # America's military not ready for prime time

In his speech accepting the GOP nomination for president, Gov. George W. Bush charged that "two entire divisions of the entire divisions of the fire. Spokesman Ken Bacon, who acquired some notoriety when he leaked Linda Tripp's personnel file in an attempt to smear her during the Monica Lewinsky scandal, denied Bush's assertion. President Clinton's to milliary advisor, General Meny divisions are the for combat, there are "some readiness shortfalls" that will not equickly repaired. "Gone readiness starts down, you don't just turn it around overnight," he said.

Gen. Shelton acknowledged

Gen. Shelton acknowledged that the two divisions to which Bush referred reported last fall they were not ready for war. But how can they be ready so rapidly when, according to Gen. Shelton, "you don't just rum it around overnight."?

Bush responded, "I am amazud that they ware they have been a manazud that they ware they have been shelton."

you don't list tun't a dulin overnight."

Bush responded, "I am amazed that they would put out a statement right after our convention. The curious why it took them this long to say tiey were combat ready after a report list. November said they weren't." More attention has been paid to sensitivity training and diversity in the armed forces during the Clinton-Gore years than on the ability to fight and win wars. Since 1994, when the Clinton administration sexually integrated basic training, a large majority of male and female military trainers have reported an increase in disciplinary problems among recruits. Physical conditioning has suffered because of a gender-normed scoring system that allows women to be perceived as performing as well as men. The Army has concentrated on the morale of women but not of men, and it has redefined "proficiency" and the "soldierization" process by de-emphasizing physically demanding components. The Marine Corps has refused to adjust its standards and still trains men and women separately, enjoying great success as a result.

capabilities to the more modern thermonuclear weapons designs."

Good people are leaving the armed services because they can no longer stand serving under this administration. Last year, Lt. Patrick J. Burns retired from the Navy after President Clinton removed his name from a promotion list at the behest of then-Secretary of the Navy John Dalton. Burns' forced retirement followed his appearance on "50 Minutes," during which he raised questions about serious problems in the Navy. At his retirement .-eremony in Virginia Beach, Burns said, "We are presently over 1,100 pilots short of what we need to fully man our air wings. Our aircraft carriers routinely deploy with anywhere from 500 to 1,500 sailors less than their minimum manning and occupational capability requirements."

Burns added, "It annoys me that we currently serve under an administration completely divorced from our warrior cul-ture, which misunderstands and utterly disdains our profession. Yes, it astounds me that our best uncy wincu misinderstands and utterly disdains our profession. Yes, it astounds me that our best people are leaving the service in droves, disgusted by uniformed leaders who are unwilling to stand up for their subordinates or their beliefs. I understand why our junieg officers and enlisted people believe that their leaders live in an ethical vacuum where integrity and personal accountability have been supplanted by careerism and self-interest." New enemies and new technologies threaten the United States in the post-Cold War era. The test of our readiness is not "peacekeeping" efforts in Bosnic Rosovo and elsewhere. Lust year the National Intelligence Council reported: "We project that during the next 15 years the United States most likely will face USM threats from Russia, China and North Korea, probably from Iraq," Bush has raised the right question about our readiness. The Clinton-Gore administration and Pentagon careerists don't want to provide an honest answer. The defense of the nation is a fundamental concern, and it ought to be a central issue in the presidential campaign.

Study: Sir Francis Drake explored Pacific Northwest on secret mission

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) – Sir Francis Drake explored the Pacific Northwest on a secret mission for England more than 420 years ago, a geographer claims in a 300-page research claims in a 300-page research paper.

Samuel Bawlf, 56, said the full of extent of Drake's explorations emerged from a web of state intrigues, encrypted maps and official cover-ups in the lethal jockeying for power between Queen Elizabeth 1 of England and King Phillip II of Spain.

A number of experts say Bawlf's research about the expedition in 1579 poses a significant challenge to long-held assumptions about European exploration along the North American west coast.

Drake became the most celebrated adventurer of the Elizabethan age by circumnavigating the globe between 1578 and 1580. Before his passage across the Pacific, he is known to have ventured up the west coast but historians have long believed he got little—farther—north—than—California before turning for home in the fall of 1579. Bawlf said he became curious about several months of Drake's time that appeared to be unaccounted for Bawlf, who set up the provinctal Heritage Trust white provinctal Heritage Trust white serving as a British Columbia Cabinet minister from 1975 to 1986, spent half a decade poring over ancient maps and maritime records from Drake's time at the

Enviros blast administration for dragging feet on reactor shutdown

IDAHO FALLS (AP) - More than three dozen environmental and anti-nuclear groups called on Energy Secretary Bill Richardson on Monday to take immediate steps to carry out the 1994 congressional directive to that down a controversial reactor in eastern Idaho.

In a letter to Richardson, the groups that included the Snake River Alliance, reiterated the findings of the Energy Department's Inspector General that in the six years since the congressional decision signed by President Clinton the department has not taken the appropriate action to shut down the Experimental Breeder Reactor II.

Metal Reactor program, which consisted mainly of the reactor at the Idaho National Engineering and Environmental Laboratory, amid increasing concern that the technology could foster nuclear proliferation. In their formal response included in the audit report, Energy Department officials generally accepted the findings and conceded that department practices in past years had been deficient in certain areas.

But the department said management of the project has changed since approval of the 1938 plan and that many of the 1938 plan and that many of the conceded the deficiencies cited by the deficiencies cited by the deficiencies cited by the department dispute the audit began last March. But the department dispute of the technology of the support of the project has the deficiencies cited by the support of the support of the support of the project of the support of the project of the control of t oping the process rightly fell into that category. It also disputed the value the cost tracking tools discussed in the report, contending they would not increase the assurance of effective spending in research work that is inherently uncertain.

The attack on the department was the second in less than a week. Earlier, the Snake River Alliance and others blasted the department for pressing ahead with plans to process 26 metric tons of reactor fuel with a technology linked to the breeder reactor. That decision, they say, also ignores the 1994 congressional mandate to drop technology critics say would forefer nuclear proliferation.

Burley city hesitates over light

BURLEY – It's been nearly four years since the City Council approved a traffic light on the highway in North Burley.

And now that the Idaho Transportation Department is ready to tackle construction, some council members are hesistant to move forward.

The department has agreed to put in a traffic light at the entrances to the Kmart and Burley inn parking lots because of the high volume of traffic. The $120,000 traffic light would cost the city $42,000. I have the council decided against the light because it would near to reduce the near 5 to 10 years.

Council member Curtis Mendenhall acknowledged the near 5 to 10 years.

Council member Curtis Mendenhall acknowledged the need for a fix, but was concerned a traffic light would be a Band-Ald, costing more in the long run. Mendenhall said there were better ways to spend state and local tax dollars. He preferred instead to seek grants that could be used to purchase rights of wand property for widening back roads.

"I have trouble spending tax-payer money, as badly as we need it," Mendenhall said.

The most vocal proponent of the light, council member Al Thaxton, was on the City Council when it unanimously approved of the traffic signal in 1996. He argued that if it's taken four years for the Transportation Department to move forward on the traffic signal, "ir'll take twice as long or three times as long to get anything done with that Former City Council member Brent Kerbs, who also owns Kerbs Oil service station at the proposed site of the traffic signal, said even as a short-term fix, the traffic light is worth the money. Kerbs said he has heard countless gripes from out-of-town passensy who say the traffic discourages them from coming back.

With a new Jack in the Box restaurant, and another restaurant rumored to be going in, access will only get worse, Kerbs said. And if it takes the department six to eight years to complete the entire highway project. I don't call that a Band-Ald," he said.

Devin Rigby with the Transportation Department had assured the council at its last meining that the light would be designed so that about half of the cost could be salwaged.

The department has proposed that 92.7 percent of the future highway project be paid with feer all funds, and that the state would match the remaining 2 percent. The city's responsibility would be to pursue the federal portion.

portion.
The council tabled a decision until the department could explain how the traffic light would work and exact costs.

In other business, city Administrator Mark Mitton presented for the council's review, an ordinance that would establish joint control of Burley's north impact area in Minidoka County joint control of Burley's north impact area in Minidoka County cottend that area from 700 West to 750 West between Interstate 84 and the Snake River.

The Minidoka County Planning and Zoning Commission would retain jurisdiction on agricultural land in the impact area, but any zoning changes must go through Burley's Planning and Zoning Commission, City Administrator Mark Mitton said.

Any comments Burley makes will go back to Minidoka County as well go back to Minidoka County as the city has been wording with property owner Mike Atchley, who wants to develop his property, Mitton said Atchley wants to subdivide his property, but he is repluctant to spend $500,000 on a central sewer.

Jerry Bankhead, chief of Malta Fire.

Fifty-seven rural departments span southern Idaho' from Craters of the Moon National Monument to Fairfield, and from Ketchum to Snowville, Utah, said Andy Payne, fire danagement officer for the Bureau of Land Management in Shoshone. The BLM and the rural fire departments have joint operating agreements to help one another when a fire breaks out and to share training and equipment.

Volunteer departments in outlying communities often are closer and reach a range fire before BLM crews, Payne said. The volunteers have been the BLM's saving grace this year, he said. They've helped with most of the more than 100 BLM fires in southern Idaho so far this season.

"Most of the time, they'll have souther folials so fait this sea-"Most of the time, they'll have it knocked down or be working on containing it," he said. Volunteer crews who fight BLM fires earn wages after four hours on a fire. In Malta, any money made from the fires goes back to the department. The exception was the 1996 Elba fire, which burned for more than aweek, Bankhead said.

Remains of last Yahi go home

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) – Ishi, the "Last Wild Man in North America," is coming home.

In life, the American Indianwas put on display as a museum exhibit after he walked out of the wilderness in 1911. In death, he suffered the same fate when his brain was shipped off to the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C.

"It's about time," said Larry Myers, executive secretary of the California Native American Heritage Commission. "This should never have happened." California Indians are scheduled to take formal possession of Ishi's brain on Tuesday in a private ceremony at the Smithsonian, said museum spokesman Rundall Kremer. They will reunite it with Ishi's cremated remains, which have spent decades in a cemetery south of San Francisco, for secret burial ceremony in the foothills of majestic Michael Lassen in far Northern Calornia. In an unexplained inconsistency, Kroeber later sent the brain to the Smithsonian.

Ishi became a figure in California folklore. He was the subject of the 1961 book "Ishi in Two Worlds" — written by Kroeber's widow, Theodora – that became part of the history lesson plan for California fourthgraders.

Tussock moths take their toll on 30,000 acres of trees

MOSCOW (AP) – The Douglas-fir tussock moth is infesting more than 30,000 acres in the Moscow Mountain and McCrosky State Park areas and reaching outbreak populations. About four miles northeast of

Troy, a forest practices adviser with the Idaho Department of Lands has put five pheromone monitoring systems on private property.

The area is not highly infested but the traps will help the department study the extent of the outbreak, which is believed to be in break, which is believed to be in its second year.

The traps should start serving their purpose in a few days, as some of the small, grayish brown moths emerge from their tar, con-tine cocons in search of a mate. Nearly 75 percent of the pupae and eggs are killed each year by natural causes; however, every eight to 10 years the moth population builds to epidemic every eight to 10 years the moth population builds to epidemic numbers.

This year marks the first time the Lands Department is able to monitor a large-scale outbreak. About 80 sties, with five trapseach, have been monitored over the years to show population trends. This year, an additional 40 to 50 sites were identified and traps placed in those areas.

"This information will tell us where the insect is," said Ladd Livingston, forest entomologist. "In the late summer and fall we will spend time doing another survey looking for egg masses and old pupal cases and all of this information combined will help us to have an understanding where the populations next will be the highest."

The Lands Department will present the data to Potlatch and Troy landowners this fall.

BUHL - The Westend Theatre Company grew out of community interest.

David Blaszkiewicz, drama instructor at Buhl High School and company director, says the group was formed to promote theater in the Buhl, Filer, Castleford and Hagerman communities. At its first meeting May 30, auditions for the first play were set.

"Interest in the theatre company came from the community," Blaszkiewicz said. "Such a group had been talked about for a year or so. This year, we just decided to try it. The high school drama students passed the word and we had 22 people turn out for auditions."

After the auditions June 8, an organizational meeting was held and a board of directors chosen. They are Dan Thom, Cathleen Thom, Susan Basessquest, Pala Hart, Cathe Woods, Sherri Hutchinson and Blaszkiewicz.

Broadband may deepen divide

Split may separate urban techies from rural consumers

WASHINGTON - A new digital divide may be emerging, this time separating urban Americans with have access to high-speed Internet connections from rural consumers who can't get it, the Federal Communications - Commission teams of seconds.

Communications—Commission—warned recently.
The original digital divide, which, federal agencies, technology associations and minority groups have worried about for years, is the one that separates consumers who have computers and Internet access from those who don't. That divide tends to occur based on income, education, race and ethnicity.

The latest digital gap, over broadband technologies that allow consumers to travel the Internet at much greater speeds, is dividing Americans by geography. The FCC reported Thursday that 2.8 million homeowners and businesses subscribed to a broadband Internet service at the end of last year, and that these technologies are being deployed in a "reason—ble and tlmely fashion overall."—High-speed Internet technologies are only beginning to become available, usually through cable television modems or digital subscriber lines offered by telephone companies.

"It is incumbent on us not to letter better these particularly vulnerable areas be left behind in connecting almericans to high-speed services," said FCC Chairman William Kennard.

The FCC's first-ever survey of broadband technologies found just 19 percent of the nation's most sparsely populated ZIP odd areas have at least one high-speed futures subscriber. The nationwide average name at ZIP code is 59 percent.

Broadband use among myal states, and territories such as wicker "is as location," and territories such as wicker "is as location, while in New York it $2.7 percent," said FCC commissioner Gloria Tristani. Texas Public Utility Commissioner Brett Perlman, who worked with the FCC staff in compiling the report, said the results suggest urban consumers may need to subsidize rural Internet users because of the high service costs in remote locations.

Telephone bills already provide such subsidies for connecting schools and libraries to the Internet.

Options abound for local Internet access numbers

By Jim Coates Chicago Tribune

Q. I live in Hoboken, N.J., and, after various mergers, my Internet service provider is EarthLink. When it was originally Netcom, we had no problem connecting to a local number with no long-distance charge. Now because of the mergers, Hoboken has lost all its no-fee connection numbers. Short of changing my ISP, which I will do if necessary, what can be done?

—Thomas Mosley

A. S the doctor once told Edgar Allan Poe, I don't like the sound of that cough, Mr. M. I am assuming, of course, that you checked the access numbers from within the superb EarthLink home Q. I live in Hoboken, N.J., and, enecked the access numbers from within the superb EarthLink home page (www.earthlink.com/home/acces) to make sure your home is, indeed, out of range. Sticking with EarthLink is possible by upping your current $20 per month deal to a $25 per month 800-number plan. But you only get five hours per month before a $5 per hour surcharge kicks in. If I were you I would sever my EarthLink and log on to www.the ist.com operated by emedia publishing tycoon Alan Mcckler. There you will flind the world's most comprehensive listing of Internet service providers, arranged by area code and local exchange, making it easy to home in on a provider with no-cost local dial-ups.

A. Your problem underscores the fact that high-speed Internet connections remain-the Wild-West of the Information Age, and problems like yours are both commonplace and a bit hard to fix. You need to reconcile the settings on the 3Com network card what PacBell installed in your PC when you signed up for that slick and pick properties from the displant of the settings and pick properties from the displant of the settings and change the one that is creating the conflict that hangs up your machine when you try to shut down.

Pocket-size DVD provides

Forget the book and instead prop a movie screen on your lap for that next business flight. Sony's almost pocket-size DVD player is designed to show movies to people on the move.

Smaller than some paperbacks, the DVP-FX1 is less than half as big as a laptop computer. A flipup-screen uses liquid crystal diodes to make the picture. The video signal comes from the DVD player in the main body.

Built-in speakers provide the soundtrack, although considerate travelers will want to use head-phones. A detachable battery pack fits sleekly on the back and can be charged for up to four hours of viewing time. The screen has vivid color, but it blurs some details. People who pay attention to screen credits will have to squint to read the print at the beginning and end of a film. But the resolution is at least as good as the picture on most laptop computers. Images also don't pull a disappearing act when viewed from the side, as they do on some laptop screens.

viding the appearance of a much higher screen resolution than is actually being used.

The effect was instantly apparent in the games I tested. Not only did the on-screen images seem razor sharp, but the annoying ripple effect often created where a pame's graphics engine attempts, to redraw a scene from a new perspective disappeared as well. Because the technology works on any game programmed using Gilde, Open GL or D3D, most old games will get a welcome face lift.

Diet community talks of chewing the fat

Los Angeles Times

If pork-rind makers were assembling a consumer dream team, Sandy Clark would be the last one dreifted. Clark is female, white-collar, health-conscious and Jewish: Lousy demographics for peddling deep-fried pigskin.

But that was before the high-protein, low-carbohydrate diet craze. Clark, a West Hollywood computer programmer, now munches the zero-carbohydrate skins instead of potato chips. She tossee them in salads for a croutonlike crunch and pulverizes them as a coating for fried chicken. Tale of the tape: Clark has lost 17 pounds in just over two months while consuming two bags of pork rinds a week with her codicting husband.

Call it the pigskin paradox. Weight watchers have helped catapult pork rinds, that Southern-fried scourge of the food pyramid, into an unlikely diet aid and one of America's fastest-growing snacks.
Boosted by weight-loss gurus such as Dr. Robert Atkins, whose regimen includes fried pigskin dipped in sour cream, pork-rind whole.

Long a fixture at truck stops and liquor stores, pork rinds are turning up in high-end grocery chains, executive lunch boxes and Internet chat rooms. Epicurean dieters are elevating the blue-collar snack into fulfledged cuisine, tossing it into recipes from French toast to meatballs.

Hunery distance.

Hungry dieters are ecstatic.

Nutritionists are horrified. And jubilant manufacturers are as puffed up as their product. Weary of insults heaped on a Southern specialty known to some as the "cracker," scarcker," some purveyors are tickled that salted, deep-fried hop flesh is catching on with the dieting incrowd.

"I'm not sure you could call this health food," said a grinning Rudblph Gaytan, inspecting mounds of sizzling skins tumbling fresh from the fryer at his Industry, Calif. based Gaytan Foods. "But we're thrilled that more people are trying the product."

Study: Premature babies suffer social problems later

WASHINGTON (AP) – Babies born prematurely tend to have more problems in school and in childhood socializing than do babies that were carried to full term, according to a new study. The study, by psychology researchers at Syracuse University, found that significantly more children born prematurely had behavioral, learning and thinking problems than did children who were born full-term. The study was presented Monday at the national towention of the American Psychological Association.

Lawrence Lewandowski of Syracuse University said the-study was important because more babies born at 24 to 31 weeks now are being kept alive and become well enough physically to leave the hospital.

A study co-authored by Lewandowski and Jeremie R. Barlow compared the development of 118 babies born premarurely (gestation of 24 to 31 weeks) with that of 119 babies who were delivered after a full term gestation, 38 to 42 weeks. The study conclusions were based on tests that started at birth and were continued at intervals until the age of 10. Barlow said that she found 39 percent of the premature babies had below normal [10] so 6 85 or less, while only 13 percent of the full term indants had such [0]s. The international average for IQs of 85 or less is 16 percent.

Based on data from question-naires filled out by teachers and parents. Barlow said the researchers also found that the premature youngsters had more social problem.

Bush gets mixed reviews on minority record

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - George W. Bush portrays himself as a man of inclusiveness, a Republican who has been opening doors for minorities ever since becoming governor of Texas. Critics say his record back home is mixed, at best.

Bush, who says he's committed to making minority appointments if elected president, has indeed named blacks, Hispanics and Asinn-Americans to high-profile state positions. Minority students' test scores have improved in Texas, inching closer to those of whites.

test scores have improved in Texas, inching closer to those of whites.

On the other hand, his selections for state boards and commissions – his only real appointment power because the Texas governor has no cabinet – run far short of the state's population percentages for Hispanics and blacks.

Minorities are overrepresented in the state's poverty ranks and among children who lack health insurance. And critics contend that state figures showing Hispanic school dropout rates declining are simply untrue.

As Bush begins the general election campaign as the Republican presidential nominee, the figures on his minority appointments can be read more than one way.

Seventy-seven percent of Bush's state appointees have been when and 37 percent from other children and 37 percent women.

That's a lower proportion of minorities and women than his predecessor, Democratic Gov. Ann Ritchards. And it's considerably lower than the state's ethnic and gender percentages. But it's about the same as Mark White, the Inst-Democratic governor before Richards, and higher than that of Bill Clements, the last Republican governor before Bush.

About S5 percent of Texas' 20 million people are non-Hispanic-white, 30 percent are Hispanic and 12 percent black. Asian-Americans, American Indians and people of other races and ethnicity make up the remaining 3 percent.

But Gary Bledsoe, state director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, sees a lack of minority influence near the ton.

sees a lack of minority influence near the top.

"There clearly does not appear to be true inclusiveness in his administration, as there is no one like Colin Powell in important meetings to express a different point of view that might be reflective of popular thoughts or beliefs in the African-American community," Bledsoe said.

Just as, Bush says he will bring his commitment to minority participation to the White House, he is campaigning as a candidate dediipation to the White House, he is campaigning as a candidate dedi-cated to improving education. "Governor Bush and his people in education have set a climate in the state whereby progress for all children is expected, and at this point, is occurring, said Thomas Toco, a Democratic superinten-dent at the Fort Worth Independent School District.

en water covers the head, a ired fathoms are as one." —Persian proverb

"I had an impossible choice at trick four," explained East.
"Whatever I led involved some danger."
"Agreed," replied West. "However, one of your fears was an imaginary one."
East won his club ace and returned his club eight to South's king. This was a falsecard that fooled nobody. If West had the queen, he would have led it. And if Least had A-Q-3, he would have returned the queen instead of the eight.

gueen, ne would nave test it. And per turned the queen instead of the eight.

South led his singleton diamond queen. When West signaled with his seven, South overtook with dummy's king. East won, but what to lead next? A spade return, would gain nothing, and a diamond return would do no better. East considered a trump return, but only fleetingly. Leading a low trump from Q-2 would cost a trump trick whenever West had Ap-x. So East meekly returned a diamond, hoping it was West who had the singleton.

South jumped on this opportunity, discarding his club queen. This allowed him to finesse twice in trumps, holding his losses to only two minor-suit aces and one trump.

East had good reason to fear a diamond or spade return at trick four. But he had no reason to fear a diamond or spade return at trick four. But he had no reason to fear a trump return. If West had a magical A-9-x. a trump return at trick four would lose nothing; East would still enjoy his club ruiff. However, in today's more likely layout, South would have no counter. If he finessed, East would score two trump tricks.

In the top of the first, Thornborrow walked and T1. Cline was hit by a pitch. An error by the Cardinal shortstop on Sean Van Elderen's grounder sent a runner across and Cody Chandler smacked an RBI single as Buhl grabbed the 20 lead after one.

Elderen's double scored a run and Chandler had his second RBI single in as many innings. Mathews was perfect through three innings. Three up - three down each frame with just two balls leaving the infield. His no-hitter was spoiled in the fourth, however, with a pair of singles. But a flyout and Cline's unassisted putout at third ended the Cardinals rally.

"I came out with a purpose. They made us mad," said Mathews, who helped his own cause by going 3-for 3 with three runs and two RBIs. "I was seeing the ball good tonight. I wanted to make sure I gor the ball in play."

Three straight walks in the fourth brought another pitcher to the mound for Pratire. After a strikeout and pop-up, Mathews added a two-run single just past the second baseman. Hamilton's fly to right fell out of the fielder's glove allowing two more runs to score as the Tribe took a commanding 10-0 lead.

Buhl gave itself some insurance in the fifth to make sure it would be an early night, even though they wouldn't need it. Cline and Chandler walked and Jeff Walker smacked an RBI single. Josh Prince blasted a triple over the right fielder's head, and the relay went into the dugout as Price walked home.

But Buhl wasn't done yet, loading the bases again. Thornborrow added an RBI single, Cline was hit by a pitch, Van Elderen plared one with a single, and Chandler's fielder's choice scored another before the third out was recorded.

The Indians finished with 15 hits, including a pair of home runs from Van Elderen and Prince.

Walker picked up the complete game victory allowing eight hits and four runs, two unearned.

It was a Boise error that turned the tide early in the game. Clinetapped a grounder back to the pitcher who sent the throw overthe first baseman's head and allowing Cline to reach second base. Van Elderen made the Gems pay for the error, plating Cline with a towering shot over the right-field fence.

"I fisted it, but I must have swung pretty hard," said Van Elderen, who was 2 for 4 with two runs and three RBIs.

"Everybody relpxed when we got the big lead. It took us an inning or two to get ging again." The second inning scaled Boise's fate when 11 Tribe batters came to the plate and Buhl put an eight-spot on the board on five hits.
